By comparison of returns made on September 9, 1903, with those of September 15, 1902, it is observed that there has been an increase in number of reporting associations of 441 and a net increase of $196,501,053.87 in aggregate resources. The increases of the principal items of resources are as follows: Loans and discounts, $201,319,291; United States bonds, $65,799,650; specie, $31,320,047.92; legal tenders, $14,992,241.

During this period the loanable funds were augmented as follows: Capital stock to the extent of $48,187,241; surplus and other profits, $60,760,984.23; Government deposits, $25,671,197.37.

The net increase in aggregate resources was 3.2 per cent, but in loans and discounts 6.1 per cent. The banks in every geographical division, exclusive of the New England States, participated in the increase in loans, varying from 4.1 per cent in the Eastern States to 37.1 per cent in the Pacific States. The increase in the Middle Western States was 6.6 per cent, in the Western States, 10.7 per cent, and in the Southern States, 17.5 per cent. The decrease in the volume of loans of banks in the New England States was $16,400,000 or 3.9 per cent.

Notwithstanding the increase in loanable funds and the volume of loans and discounts, there was a net decrease from September 15, 1902, to September 9, 1903, in individual deposits of $52,940,394.86. This item reached the maximum during the year, and also during the existence of the national banking system, on June 9, 1903, namely, $3,200,993,509.22. This was an increase of $32,718,248.51 over April 9, 1903. From this high-water mark of $3,200,993,509.22 there was a decline on September 9 to $3,156,333,499.07, or $44,660,010.15.

The capital stock and surplus funds of the associations gradually increased from $714,616,353 and $335,763,730.38, respectively, on November 25, 1902, to $753,722,658 and $370,390,684.26, respectively, on September 9, 1903. National-bank circulation outstanding varied but slightly from November 25, 1902, to April 9, 1903, but decreased between those dates from $336,505,993 to $335,093,791. On June 9, 1903, however, the issues reached $359,261,109, and there was a further increase on September 9, 1903, to $375,037,815.

The deposits of the United States with the national banks have shown but slight variations during the year, the amount to the credit of the Government on November 25, 1902, being $138,464,809.47, and at the close of the year $140,411,999.26. Bills payable and rediscounts were at their minimum on February 6, 1903, and at that time amounted to $22,921,837.75, and were at their maximum, $47,066,372.06, on September 9, 1903.

United States bonds on deposit to secure circulation increased from $341,328,820 on November 25, 1902, to $343,119,320 on April 9, 1903; to $368,941,370 on June 9, and to $381,568,980 on September 9. United States bonds on deposit to secure public deposits increased during the year from $131,376,700 on November 25, 1902, to $136,940,020 on September 9, 1903. Bonds other than United States securities, deposited to secure public deposits, amounted on November 25, 1902, to $19,705,749.84, and steadily decreased to $16,743,055 on June 9, 1903. On September 9, 1903, however, securities of this character were on deposit to the amount of $22,000,134.60.

The specie holdings with the banks varied from a minimum of $388,616,377.85 on June 9, 1903, to a maximum of $417,572,146.37 on February 6 of that year. The amount of gold in the banks on the date last mentioned was $105,288,729; gold treasury certificates, $118,765,050; gold treasury certificates, payable to order, $42,215,000, and gold clearing-house certificates, $72,435,000; total gold and gold certificates, $338,703,779. Of the holdings of silver $11,160,021 was in dollars; $58,161,298 in certificates, and $9,547,048 in fractional coin; total silver, $78,868,367. On September 9, 1903, the specie held amounted to $397,556,168, classified as follows: Gold coin, $105,569,894; gold treasury certificates, $119,367,220; gold treasury certificates, payable to order, $27,180,000; gold clearing-house certificates, $63,307,000; total gold and gold certificates, $315,424,114; silver certificates, $62,791,768; silver dollars, $10,336,143, and fractional silver coin, $9,004,143; total silver, $82,132,054.

RESERVE.

The deposit liabilities of national banks on which reserve is required amounted on November 25, 1902, to $3,705,217,132, against which was held in cash, in funds credited by reserve agents, and in the 5 per cent redemption fund, $987,074,218, or 26.64 per cent. The legal reserve, however, amounted to $817,981,481, or 22.08 per cent. The deposit liabilities increased on February 6, 1903, to $3,851,394,205; declined to $3,823,441,585 on April 9, and to $3,817,035,031 on June 9. At date of the report made on September 9, 1903, the deposit liabilities had increased to $3,863,512,112, on which legal reserve was held of $850,762,184, or 22.02 per cent. The percentage of all available funds to deposit liabilities ranged from a minimum of 26.25 on April 9 to a maximum of 27.70 on February 6, and percentage of legal reserve was the lowest and highest on the same dates, being 21.68 and 22.48, respectively. The average rate per cent of legal reserve maintained by the national banks of the city of New York exceeded the requirement at date of each report during the year, and varied from a maximum of 28.41 on November 25, 1902, to a minimum of 26.96 on April 9, 1903.

The aggregate reserves of Chicago banks were deficient at date of each report except on June 9, 1903, when the average was 25.30. The same comment applies to the St. Louis banks, although their reserve on June 9 was 25.79. The average rate of reserve maintained by banks in other reserve cities exceeded the requirement on each date except on November 25, 1902, namely, 24.77, and April 9, 1903, the average rate being 24.52. The uniformity of the percentage of reserve maintained by country banks is notable, as it fluctuated from a minimum of 17.50 on November 25, 1902, to a maximum of 17.66 on April 9, 1903. An examination of the reserve statements incorporated in the abstracts shows that approximately two-thirds of the legal reserve held is represented by specie and legal tenders carried in the vaults of the banks.

CLASSIFICATION OF LOANS AND DISCOUNTS OF NATIONAL BANKS ON SEPTEMBER 9, 1903.

The loans and discounts of national banks reached their maximum in the history of the system on September 9, 1903, when they aggregated $3,481,446,772. Of these loans $283,108,946 was demand paper with one or more individual or firm names; $717,258,621 on demand secured by stocks, bonds, etc.; $1,267,524,336 on time, on two or more individual or firm names; $558,115,739 on time, single-name paper, and $655,439,130 time paper secured by stocks, bonds, etc.

The loans of the banks located in the central reserve cities—New York, Chicago, and St. Louis—amounting to $902,294,038, represented over one-fourth of the entire amount of loans and discounts carried by the national banks of the country, and over one-sixth of the aggregate volume was made by the New York City banks, the exact figures being $631,565,824. The demand paper secured by stocks, etc., held by the New York banks, aggregated $281,438,758; the demand paper with one or more individual firm names $10,311,371; two or more name paper, on time, $136,021,466; single-name paper on time, $93,384,112; and time loans secured by stocks, bonds, etc., $110,410,117. The loans and discounts made by the 351 associations located in the central and other reserve cities aggregated $1,802,659,666, against $1,678,787,106 by the 4,691 associations located elsewhere.

In connection with the foregoing summary relating to the loans and discounts of national banking associations, the accompanying table, furnished to this office through the courtesy of the Wm. B. Dana Company, of New York, relating to the range and average monthly rates for money in the New York market during the year ended October 31, 1903, will be examined with interest.

As will be observed, the average monthly rate for call loans varied from a maximum of $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent in December, 1902, to a minimum of 2 per cent in August, 1903; time loans from a maximum of $6 + 2$ per cent commission in December of last year to a minimum of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent in June and July of the current year; choice double-name paper from a maximum of 6 to a minimum of $4\frac{1}{2}$, and for single-name paper 7 to $4\frac{1}{4}$.

CLEARING-HOUSE EXCHANGES.

Through the courtesy of the manager of the New York clearing house this office has been placed in receipt of statements relating to the transactions of the clearing houses of the country for the years ended September 30, 1902 and 1903. The volume of business, as indicated by the exchanges, reached $115,892,198,634 in 1902, but declined to $114,068,837,569 in 1903, the decrease being $1,823,361,065. The gross increase aggregated $2,353,386,263, and the decrease $4,176,747,328, in the latter being included the decrease in exchanges of the New York clearing house, amounting to $3,919,533,496. For the current year exchanges of the New York clearing house aggregated $70,833,655,940, approximately 62 per cent of the volume of the exchanges of the clearing houses of the country. Second in magnitude is Chicago, with $8,627,554,264, followed by Boston, with $6,837,767,883; Philadelphia, with $5,968,775,428; St. Louis, with $2,465,057,926; and Pittsburg, with $2,381,454,231. The only other clearing houses with exchanges exceeding a billion dollars are San Francisco, Baltimore, Cincinnati, and Kansas City.

The New York clearing house is represented by 57 banks, a less number than at any time since 1865, except in 1878, when the number was the same as at present, although the capital, $113,072,700, is greater than at any date since the establishment of the clearing house in 1854. Clearings of the New York association for the year 1903, amounting to $70,833,655,940, were settled by the use of $3,315,516,487 in lawful money, or 4.68 per cent of the clearings. In 1896 but 0.01 per cent of the balances was paid in gold, whereas in 1903 the percentage was 99.99. The average daily clearings during the year were $233,005,447, and the average daily balances paid in money $10,906,304. From the comparative statement of transactions of the New York clearing house from 1854 to 1903, inclusive, it is shown that the aggregate clearings have been $1,505,995,524,933.

The transactions of the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York with the clearing house for the year ended September 30, 1903, amounted to $433,873,163.44, and the amount of balances paid to the clearing house by the assistant treasurer $217,935,693.67.

In the appendix will be found tables showing the amount of exchanges of clearing houses of the United States from 1895 to 1903; the transactions of the New York clearing house from 1854 to 1903; the exchanges, balances, percentages of balances to exchanges, and of funds used in settlement of balances by the New York clearing house, annually, from 1892 to 1903; and also the clearing house transactions of the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York for the year ended September 30, 1903.

EARNINGS, DIVIDENDS, AND SHAREHOLDERS OF NATIONAL BANKS.

Section 5212 of the Revised Statutes provides in part that every national banking association shall report to this office within ten days after the declaration of a dividend the amount of such dividend and the amount of net earnings in excess thereof. This law did not take effect until 1869, in consequence of which the records of the office contain no data with respect to the earnings and dividends of national banks prior to that date.

In a large majority of cases dividends are declared semiannually, although there are a number of associations declaring quarterly and a few bimonthly dividends. The returns, however, are abstracted in semiannual periods terminating March 1 and September 1. An abstract of reports of earnings and dividends for the last two periods is incorporated in the appendix, accompanied by a summary of returns of this character from March 1, 1869, to March 1, 1903. In the table last mentioned the number of banks, their capital and surplus are averaged from the two semiannual abstracts. The number of banks reporting during the year ended March 1, 1903, was 4,451, with capital stock and surplus of $688,817,835 and $324,462,477, respectively. The net earnings amounted to $102,743,721 and the dividends $60,123,622, the latter being 8.7 per cent on the capital and 5.9 on capital and surplus. The banks paid dividends at the rate of 9.8 per cent on capital and at the rate of 6.8 per cent on capital and surplus in the year ended March 1, 1902. The table in question covers a period of thirty-four years and shows that the average rate per cent of dividends to capital was 8.25 and to capital and surplus 6.23. The net earnings of the banks from March 1, 1869, to March 1, 1903, are shown to have been $1,978,062,738, and the dividends $1,555,244,710.

Section 5210 of the Revised Statutes requires every national banking association to keep a correct list of names and residences of all shareholders, subject to inspection by stockholders, creditors of the association, and officers authorized to assess taxes under State authority, and to file with the Comptroller of the Currency a copy of the list as of the first Monday of July of each year. An examination of the lists filed in July last by the national banks shows the distribution of stock among 314,967 shareholders, the number of shares being 8,617,517, and the average holding 27 shares, approximately. Were it not for the fact that quite a number of associations in existence were conversions of State banks, with shares of stock less or more than $100, the number of shares of all national banks could readily be determined from the capital stock, as the national-bank act provides that the stock of banks of primary organizations shall be divided into shares of $100 each.

ORGANIZATION OF NATIONAL BANKS.

On February 25, 1903, the national-banking system had been in operation for a period of forty years, and from June 20, 1863, the date of issue of the first certificate authorizing a national bank to begin business, to October 31, 1903, there have been chartered 7,029 national-banking associations, with capital at date of organization of $860,931,182, of which 1,126, with capital of $293,148,628, were conversions of State banks effected in conformity with the provisions of section 5154 of the Revised Statutes, and the remaining 5,903, with capital of $567,782,554, banks of primary organization.

The impetus given to the formation of national-banking associations by the act of March 14, 1900, under authority of which banks are organized with minimum capital of $25,000, circulating notes issuable to the par value of bonds deposited, and semiannual duty on circulation reduced, 1,765 associations, with authorized capital of $104,493,000, have been added to the system. The organizations during this period represent approximately one-fourth of the total organizations effected during the existence of the national-banking system. Since March 14, and under authority of that act, banks with individual capital of less than $50,000, the average being approximately $26,000, have been organized to the number of 1,148, with capital of $29,948,000. During this period 617 banks, with individual capital of $50,000 or over, were organized, their total capital amounting to $74,545,000. The average capital of banks of the larger class is approximately $120,000.

Prior to 1900 no official record was made of national banks organized as the successors of State or private banks placed in liquidation for that purpose. Beginning with the year in question, it appears that banks of that character to the number of 561, with capital of $36,405,000, were organized; 207, with capital of $13,928,500, converted from State institutions, leaving 997, with capital of $54,159,500, as banks of primary organization. In other words, 56.5 per cent were banks of primary organization and 43.5 per cent reorganizations of State and private banks and conversion of State banks. The percentage of capital of banks of primary organization was 51.8, and of conversions and reorganizations 48.2.

Classified by geographical divisions, the Middle Western States lead both in number and capital of banks organized—547, and $31,666,000, respectively. The Southern States follow second in number of organizations, namely, 421, and capital of $22,208,000. In the Western States 380 banks, with capital of $12,360,000, were organized; in the Eastern States 325 banks, with $27,214,000 capital; in the Pacific States 70 banks, with capital of $6,520,000; and in the New England States 19 banks, with $3,900,000 capital. Two associations, with aggregate capital of $525,000, have been organized in Hawaii, and one with capital of $100,000 in Porto Rico.

Notwithstanding authority conferred for the issue of circulation to the par value of bonds deposited, bonds to the amount of $25,174,850 only were deposited as security for circulation on the capital of $104,493,000—less than one-fourth of the amount which might have been deposited and circulating notes issued thereon.

In the following table appears a statement of the number and capital of banks of both classes organized in each State and geographical division from March 14, 1900, to October 31, 1903:

During the year ended October 31, 1903, there were organized 553 associations with aggregate capital of $34,333,500, of which 343 with capital of $8,848,500 were with individual capital of less than $50,000 and 210 with capital of $25,485,000 with individual capital of $50,000 or over. A further division shows that there were 306 associations of primary organization with capital of $16,425,000; 49 with capital of $2,438,500, conversions, and 198 with capital of $15,470,000, re-organizations of State or private banks.

In addition to the augmentation of capital resulting from the organization of national banks during the year there was an increase in the capital stock of previously existing associations to the amount of $52,412,900, banks to the number of 187 increasing their capital stock in conformity with the provisions of the act of May 1, 1886. In a number of instances increases of capital were effected for the purpose of absorbing the business of other associations placed in voluntary liquidation, and to provide, in a measure, for the shareholders of the closed institutions. As reports of proceedings relating to increase of capital do not show what disposition is made of the additional stock issued, the extent to which shareholders of banks closed by liquidation participated in the increase of capital of the absorbing banks can not be stated.

The reduction of capital stock under the provisions of section 5143, United States Revised Statutes, amounted to only $2,095,000, and but 21 associations were concerned in these changes.

The most notable change effected during the past year was the increase of the capital stock of the National Bank of Commerce in New York from $10,000,000 to $25,000,000, and the consolidation with that association of the Western National Bank of United States in New York, which, prior to its liquidation, was capitalized for $12,500,000. The National Bank of Commerce and the City National Bank, of New York are the only national banking associations in existence with capital of $25,000,000. There are also in operation in the city of New York one national banking association with capital of $10,000,000 and one with $5,000,000. The only other national banks in the country with capital of $5,000,000 or more are the First National Bank of Chicago, $8,000,000, and the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis, with $7,000,000 capital. National banks to the number of 117, with capital of $1,000,000 and over, but less than $5,000,000, are in operation in the principal cities of the country.

VOLUNTARY LIQUIDATIONS AND FAILURES.

Under the provisions of section 5220 of the Revised Statutes—that is, by the action of representatives of the required number of shares of stock—1,337 national banking associations have been placed in voluntary liquidation and the corporate existence of 146 banks, organized under the acts of 1863 and 1864, have expired by limitation, thus making the total number voluntarily closed 1,483, the aggregate capital at date of closing amounting to $260,239,550.

From the date of the first failure in 1865 to October 31, 1903, receivers have been appointed for 418 national banks, their capital aggregating $71,167,420. Of these banks, however, 19, with capital of $3,725,000, were placed in solvent condition and authorized to resume business, resulting in a net loss to the system by insolvency of 399 banks, with capital at date of failure of $67,442,420. The affairs of 330 of these trusts have been finally settled and the receiverships terminated. The capital of these associations at date of failure was $51,795,920, and their outstanding circulation $16,398,783. The total amount of assets (par value) coming into possession of receivers was $188,925,911, from which there was collected $88,074,670, and settled by offsets $14,672,927. The losses on assets, compounded or sold under order of court, aggregated $75,929,065, the nominal value of the remaining assets being $10,249,249. Stockholders were assessed to the amount of $30,826,020, from which was realized $14,469,575. On claims proved, amounting to $101,724,870, dividends were paid to the amount of $72,542,142, or 71.31 per cent. Including, however, offsets allowed, loans paid, etc., creditors received, on an average, 78.55 per cent on their claims.

The cost of the liquidation of insolvent banks—that is, receivers' salaries, legal and other expenses, based on the total amount collected from assets and from assessment on shareholders—was 8.3 per cent.

In conformity with law, there is submitted herewith lists of associations closed voluntarily and otherwise during the past year:

^a Restored to solvency and resumed October 15, 1903.^b Authorized to resume business since October 31.

The foregoing list of liquidations includes 49 associations closed voluntarily by vote of shareholders and 23 by expiration of charters. Six of the associations placed in voluntary liquidation were succeeded by new associations with different titles; 20 were absorbed by other national banks, and 18 by State or private banks, leaving 5 closed presumably for the purpose of discontinuing business. Thirteen of the banks whose charters expired by limitation were organizations effected under the act of 1863, and 10 under the act of 1864. Fourteen of the banks whose corporate existence terminated by expiration of charter were succeeded by associations with different titles, organized, in the main, by the shareholders of the closed banks.

In connection with the general statistics relating to national-bank failures there appears in the appendix a table in which is summarized, by States and geographical divisions, data relating to trusts the affairs of which have been finally closed.

The table shows that the affairs of 17 national banks which failed in the New England States were settled with an average loss to creditors of only 6.89 per cent. The liabilities, represented by claims proved, offsets allowed, and loans paid, aggregate $23,956,626.

The results of the liquidation of the affairs of 61 insolvent national banks which were located in the States of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia evidence the settlement of claims aggregating $37,225,748, with an average loss of 24.07 per cent.

The settlement of receiverships terminated in the Southern States, numbering 61, was effected by payment to creditors on claims, etc., aggregating $19,505,630, of an average 67.62 per cent, the loss being 32.38 per cent.

The returns relative to banks closed in the Middle States—namely, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and Missouri—include 73 cases, the liabilities of the banks aggregating $28,027,358, which were settled with an average loss of 15.85 per cent.

Banks to the number of 85, which failed in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, and Oklahoma, have been finally liquidated, creditors receiving an average of 72.47 per cent on claims aggregating $18,814,047, the average loss being 27.53 per cent.

The table in question includes 33 insolvent banks which were liquidated in the Pacific States, viz, Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Utah, and Nevada. The liabilities of these trusts aggregate $8,526,102, and were settled with an average loss of 30.85 per cent.

Including with claims proved the amount of offsets allowed and settled and loans paid, aggregating $136,055,511, of the 330 trusts finally liquidated, creditors sustained an average loss thereon of 21.45 per cent.

Classifying these closed trusts according to capital stock—those with capital of less than $100,000, with $100,000 and less than $200,000, and those with $200,000 and over—it is shown that banks in the first class paid dividends on claims proved at the average rate of 63 per cent, and that the assessment on stockholdings produced but 36 per cent of the amount of the assessment. The banks of the second class paid 67 per cent on dividends and 41 per cent on stock assessments, whereas banks with capital of $200,000 and over paid creditors 74 per cent on their claims, and the stockholders paid 51 per cent on the stock assessment. These figures evidence the fact that the larger the bank's capital the larger the percentage realized from assets and from assessments on stockholders in case of insolvency.

The capital of each class of banks, together with the amount of claims proved, dividends paid, assessment and collection from shareholders, and percentage of dividends, assessment, collection from assessment, and of amount collected to the aggregate capital, are shown in the accompanying table:

EXPIRATION AND EXTENSION OF CORPORATE EXISTENCE OF NATIONAL-BANKING ASSOCIATIONS.

The act of February 25, 1863, provided in part that every association formed under the provisions of that act should have succession for the period limited by the articles of association, not, however, exceeding twenty years from the date of the passage of that act. When the national banking law was reenacted in the following year—June 3, 1864—the period of existence was definitely fixed at twenty years from the date of execution of the organization certificate.

Under date of July 12, 1882, in anticipation of the expiration of the corporate existence of national-banking associations, Congress provided for extension of charters for an additional period of twenty years. The act in effect permits the amendment of articles of association with respect to period of existence by the written consent of shareholders representing not less than two-thirds of the stock to be secured at any time within two years prior to the expiration of the charter of an association. The action of the Comptroller in considering an application for an extension is based on the general condition of a bank as shown from report of special examination required by law and made within a short time previous to expiration of charter.

Under the provisions of the act of July 12, 1882, and up to October 31, 1903, the corporate existence of 2,140 associations, with capital of $479,516,365, have been extended. The number of extensions under this act during the year ended October 31, 1903, was 164.

As the charters of associations which were extended under the act of July 12, 1882, reached the termination of their second corporate existence in 1902, provision was made by Congress in the act approved April 12, 1902, for reextension of charters of banks of that character, and during the year ended October 31, 1903, the charters of 228 associations were extended, and from the date of passage of the act to the close of the current report year there were 258 extensions, the capital of the banks being $68,065,300.

During the year ending October 31, 1904, the corporate existence of 121 associations, with aggregate capital of $13,840,000, will expire for the first time, and may be extended under the provisions of the act of July 12, 1882. During the same period 60 associations, with capital of $22,595,000, will reach the termination of their second period of corporate existence, extensions of which may be effected under the provisions of the act of April 12, 1902. Lists of both classes of banks, showing dates of expiration, will be found in Tables 15 and 16, respectively, of the appendix to this report.

CHANGES IN CAPITAL AND CIRCULATION WITH THE AMOUNT AND MARKET PRICE OF BONDS.

The number and authorized capital of national banks steadily increased during the year from 4,679 and $713,435,695, respectively, on October 31, 1902, to 5,147 and $766,367,095, respectively, on October 31, 1903, the increase in number of banks being 468 and in capital stock $52,931,400. At the beginning of the report year bonds to the amount of $338,452,670 were on deposit with the Treasurer as security for circulation, on which notes were issued to the amount of $335,783,189. On December 31, 1902, bond deposits and circulation had increased to $344,252,120 and $342,127,844, respectively, but by March 31 the bonds had decreased to $342,160,770 and the circulation to $338,349,814. Refunding operations were resumed in April, and the bond deposit increased $10,535,350 during that month. In May the increase was $15,131,800; in June, $7,519,350; in July, $4,825,760, and in August $1,313,400. There was a slight decrease ($1,600), however, in September, but an increase of $1,242,000 in October, following the resumption of the refunding operations which began on September 24.

At the close of the year ended October 31, 1902, of bonds on deposit as security for circulation 95 per cent was in 2 per cent consols of 1930, and at the close of the year ended October 31, 1903, over 98 per cent of the total amount was of that class.

In the subjoined table relating to number and capital, bonds, and circulation, is incorporated the average monthly price of 2 per cent consols during the year. The highest average monthly market price of 2 per cent consols ruled in October, 1902, namely 110.0185. At the close of the calendar year the price was 106.6971; increased in January, 1903, to 109.2308, and thereafter steadily declined to 106.1875 on May 31. The price did not exceed 106 and a fraction until September, when it advanced to 109.1719, but again declined in October to 107.2685.

National bank circulation covered by bonds and by lawful money increased from $380,476,334 on October 31, 1902, to $419,610,683 on October 31, 1903. On an average about one-tenth of the total circulation outstanding is represented by notes of banks reducing their circulation, associations in voluntary liquidation, and those in charge of receivers and which are covered by deposits of lawful money.

DISTRIBUTION OF NATIONAL BANK CIRCULATION IN RESERVE CITIES, STATES, TERRITORIES, AND GEOGRAPHICAL DIVISIONS IN RELATION TO CAPITAL STOCK.

The reports of condition, made to this office by national-banking associations in conformity with periodical calls, show in general the amount of national-bank notes in circulation in the principal political subdivisions of the country, but do not contain the information essential to a knowledge of the extent to which circulating notes are issued by banks of various classes in proportion to capital. From the records of this office on July 18, 1903, a table has been compiled showing the number and capital of national banks issuing circulating notes to the maximum—that is, the paid-in capital stock—to the extent of 75 per cent and less than 100 per cent of capital; 50 per cent and less than 75 per cent; 25 per cent and less than 50 per cent, and less than 25 per cent. The number of associations in existence on that date is shown to have been 5,020, with capital of $755,764,165 and circulation $378,014,135. Banks to the number of 1,492, with capital of $177,850,850, had outstanding the maximum amount of notes—that is, an equivalent of capital paid in—245 banks with capital of $66,681,810, circulation to the amount of $55,487,710, the issues in each case being 75 per cent or more, but less than 100 per cent, of the maximum issuable; 715 banks, with capital of $110,473,400, were of the class issuing notes to the extent of 50 per cent or more, but less than 75 per cent of their capital, the issues amounting to $62,190,000. Associations to the greatest number and with the largest amount of capital stock are in the class issuing notes to the extent of 25 per cent and over, but less than 50 per cent of their capital. Banks of this class numbered 2,335, with capital of $199,491,045, and circulation of $58,066,475. There were 243 associations, with capital of $201,267,060, whose issues aggregated $24,419,100, in each instance the issues amounting to less than 25 per cent of the paid-in capital stock. Included in this latter class are 8 banks, with capital of $5,110,000, which have no circulating notes outstanding.

The outstanding circulation of the national banks located in the city of New York was $45,296,500, and their capital stock $100,200,000. The Chicago banks, with capital of $25,600,000, issued notes to the amount of $3,736,000, and St. Louis banks issued circulation to the amount of $11,345,640 on capital stock of $15,600,000. The aggregate capital and circulation of the banks in the three central reserve cities was $141,400,000 and $60,378,140, respectively. The capital of the banks in the other reserve cities aggregated $178,180,260, and their circulation $74,756,700. The banks located elsewhere than in reserve cities issue a larger proportion of circulation to capital stock than the other associations. The capital of the 4,676 country banks was $436,183,905, and their circulation $242,879,295, or about 55 per cent of the maximum, as against 42 per cent by the reserve city banks. Only 73 of the 354 reserve city banks have issued circulation to the maximum, whereas 1,419 of the 4,676 country banks are in that class.

The table referred to, and in which has been incorporated the population of each city, State, and geographical division, as shown by the census of 1900, follows:

NATIONAL-BANK NOTES PRESENTED FOR REDEMPTION.

There is submitted in the table following a statement of the average amount of national-bank circulation outstanding in the fiscal years 1901, 1902, and 1903, together with the amount presented for redemption at the Treasury Department, showing, separately, notes fit for circulation which were redeemed and returned to the issuing banks, notes redeemed and destroyed for reissues, and the amount redeemed and destroyed without reissue.

The average amount of circulation in the year 1901 was $336,200,000. During that year notes to the amount of $147,400,000, or 43.8 per cent of the total issues, were presented for redemption. Under the provisions of section 3 of the act of June 20, 1874, when notes in good condition are redeemed by the Treasurer and the latter has been reimbursed, they are forwarded to the respective associations by which they were issued. Notes of this character to the amount of $57,600,000 were received by the Treasurer, representing 39.1 per cent of the total amount presented and 17.1 per cent of the total issues. Notes unfit for circulation were received, redeemed, and destroyed, for which new notes were issued to the amount of $71,400,000, which is 48.4 per cent of the total amount presented and 21.2 per cent of the total issues.

The redemptions without reissue aggregated $18,600,000, or 12.6 per cent of the amount presented and 5.5 per cent of the total issues.

In 1902 notes were presented for redemption to the amount of $171,800,000, or 48 per cent of the aggregate issues, namely, $357,900,000, of which 33.3 per cent, or $57,300,000, being in good condition, were redeemed and returned to the banks of issue. The redemptions and destructions for reissue amounted to $89,600,000, or 52.1 per cent of the amount presented and 25 per cent of the total issues. The redemptions during the year for which there were no reissues aggregated $20,000,000, which was 11.6 per cent of the amount presented and 5.6 per cent of the total issues.

The average amount of notes in circulation during the fiscal year 1903 was $378,400,000, and of the amount there was presented for redemption $196,400,000, or 51.9 per cent. Notes returned to the bank as fit for circulation amounted to $62,500,000, or 31.8 per cent of the amount presented for redemption and 16.5 per cent of the total issues. The redemptions and destructions of unfit notes for reissue aggregated $104,600,000, 53.2 per cent of the amount presented and 27.6 per cent of the total issues. The percentage of notes redeemed and destroyed without reissue was 6.9, the amount being $26,200,000.

An examination of this table is interesting in connection with calculations made by the Government actuary in 1886 and by this Bureau in 1898 of the life of national-bank notes. In 1886 the average life of notes of all denominations was calculated to be 4.9 years and in 1898 4.4 years. Confining the comparison to redemptions for reissue, it is shown that a trifle in excess of one-fifth of the issues of active banks were received for redemption, destruction, and reissue in 1901; in 1902, one-fourth, and in 1903, a trifle in excess of one-fourth, namely, 27.6 per cent. In other words, the life of notes of this character in 1901 was 4.7 years; in 1902, 4 years, and in 1903, 3.6 years, or an average for the 3 years of 4.1 years.

NATIONAL BANK CIRCULATION OUTSTANDING SECURED BY BONDS AND BY LAWFUL MONEY; AMOUNT PRESENTED AT THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT FOR REDEMPTION; REDEEMED AND RETURNED TO BANKS OF ISSUE; REDEEMED AND DESTROYED FOR REISSUE, AND AMOUNT REDEEMED AND DESTROYED WITHOUT ISSUE, TOGETHER WITH THE PERCENTAGE OF AMOUNTS PRESENTED FOR REDEMPTION TO TOTAL ISSUES AND PERCENTAGES OF AMOUNTS DISPOSED OF TO TOTAL AMOUNT PRESENTED FOR REDEMPTION.

In connection with the foregoing it is interesting to note the changes in the class and amount of bonds on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States to secure national-bank circulation on March 13, 1900, the date prior to the act authorizing the incorporation of banks with minimum capital of $25,000 and reducing the semiannual duty on circulation secured by consols of 1930 to one-fourth of 1 per cent, and on October 31, 1900, 1901, 1902, and 1903, as set forth in the following table:

During the year ended October 31, 1903, circulating notes were issued to the amount of $187,249,260, classified as follows: Notes of the denomination of $5, $31,872,060; $10s, $82,553,040; $20s, $55,035,360; $50s, $5,929,600; $100s, $11,859,200. Notes of the denominations of $10s and $20s represent approximately 73 per cent; $5s, 15 per cent; $50s, 4 per cent; and $100s, 8 per cent of the year's issues.

The amount of each denomination of circulation outstanding at the close of the year, the amount previously issued, together with total redemptions, are shown in the following table:

NOTE.—Circulation outstanding and issued by national gold banks, amounting to $77,225, not included in this table.

During the year ended October 31, 1903, national-bank notes to the amount of $220,283,487 were presented at the Treasury Department for redemption, of which about $74,000,000, being in "fit" condition for circulation, were redeemed and returned to the banks of issue, and the balance, approximately $148,000,000, redeemed and destroyed. Eighty per cent of the receipts for redemption came from the cities of New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, and St. Louis. The amount received from New York was $115,000,000, or about 50 per cent of the total receipts; $21,000,000 was received from Boston, $20,000,000 from Chicago, $15,000,000 from Philadelphia, and $10,000,000 from St. Louis. The aggregate cost of redemption of the notes presented for that purpose during the year amounted to $174,477.62, or an average of $0.90262 per $1,000.

In addition to the expense for the redemption of their circulating notes the banks paid in semiannual duty on notes during the year ended June 30, 1903, the sum of $1,708,819.92; in fees for the examination of banks $324,598.97, and for plates for printing of circulation for new banks and those extending their charters, $94,800.

PROFIT ON NATIONAL-BANK CIRCULATION.

The question of profit on national-bank circulation is frequently submitted to this office in connection with the organization of national banks and the increase of circulation of existing associations. The Comptroller has had computed by the Actuary of the Treasury Department the profit on $100,000 of circulation based on the security of two per cent consols of 1930 at the average net price monthly for the year ended October 31, 1903. In the computation money is assumed to be worth 6 per cent, in consequence of which the gross receipts are uniform—$2,000 interest on the bonds and $6,000 on the circulation. Deductions are made covering the tax on notes at the rate of one-fourth of 1 per cent semiannually, cost of redemptions, plates, agents' fees, and the sinking fund. From the net receipts is deducted the interest on the cost of the bonds at 6 per cent, to show both the amount and rate per cent of profit monthly in excess of 6 per cent during the year. The frequent fluctuations in the market price of these securities cause the variations in the percentage of profit, which range from a minimum of 0.689 in January to a maximum of 0.935 in May. The various items entering into the computation are shown in detail in the appendix to this report and the salient features are incorporated in the appended table.

COMPARISON OF CIRCULATION WITH CAPITAL AND RESOURCES OF NATIONAL BANKS, AND ALSO WITH THE COUNTRY'S STOCK OF MONEY.

There will be found in the appendix a table showing, at date of each report received from national banks, beginning October 5, 1864, and terminating September 9, 1903, the number, paid-in capital, outstanding circulation, and aggregate resources of national banking associations, together with the per cent of circulation to capital and the resources at each date and the per cent of circulation to the monetary stock on June 30 of each year.

The first abstract of reports is dated October 5, 1863, and included returns from 66 banks with capital of $7,100,000. One year later 508 banks with capital of $86,700,000 were in operation, and at the close of 1865 reports were received from 1,582 banks with capital of $403,300,000.

The number of banks did not reach 2,000 until October 2, 1874, nor did the capital exceed $500,000,000 until June 30, 1875. On December 17, 1875, the amount of reported capital was $505,400,000, but on October 2 of the following year dropped to $499,800,000, and steadily decreased thereafter to $454,000,000 on October 2, 1879. From that date there was gradual reaction, and on June 22, 1883, when there were in operation 2,417 banks, the capital amounted to $500,200,000. By July 12, 1889, the number and capital of banks reached 3,239 and $605,800,000, respectively. On May 4, 1893, there were in operation 3,830 banks, with capital of $688,700,000. This was the greatest number of banks in active operation at any date during the existence of the system prior to September 5, 1900. The act of March 14, 1900, resulted in gradual and material increase in number and capital of banks from 3,604 and $613,000,000, respectively, on February 13 of that year to 5,042 and $753,700,000, respectively, on September 9, 1903.

The banks aggregate resources reached the billion mark on July 3, 1865, amounting, approximately, to $1,126,400,000. On June 14, 1879, the resources reached $2,019,800,000, and on February 28, 1890, $3,003,300,000. There was an increase to $4,003,500,000 on September 20, 1898; to $5,048,100,000 on September 5, 1900; $6,008,700,000 on July 16, 1902, and $6,310,400,000, the highest point reached during the existence of the system, on September 9, 1903.

The act of 1864 limited the amount of issuable circulation to $300,000,000. By January, 1867, this amount had been practically reached and continued until the close of 1870, during which year an act was passed authorizing the addition of $54,000,000 to the aggregate amount theretofore authorized. There was a gradual but slight increase in circulation from the beginning of 1871 from $301,700,000 to $341,300,000 on December 26, 1873. This was the largest amount of outstanding circulation during the existence of the system prior to June 9, 1903.

The act of January 14, 1875, repealed the limit on the aggregate amount of circulating notes issuable, and the act of July 12, 1882, authorized the issue of circulating notes to the extent of 90 per cent of the par value of bonds deposited not exceeding 90 per cent of the paid-in capital stock. Notwithstanding the legislation of 1875 there was a gradual reduction in circulation from $324,500,000 on March 1 of that year to $290,000,000 on June 22, 1877. The volume showed but slight variations from the latter date to June 14, 1879, but on December 12 of the latter year the issues had increased to $321,900,000, and on May 19, 1882, the date of the last report prior to the passage of the act of July 12, 1882, amounted to $315,600,000. There were but slight changes between that date and the close of 1883, but beginning with 1884, with slight exceptions, there was a gradual and rapid decrease to $122,900,000 on October 2, 1890. On September 25, 1891, the outstanding issues amounted to $131,300,000, and there was a gradual increase from that date to $210,600,000 on December 17, 1896.

This amount was not again exceeded until April 26, 1900. On that date the effect of the act of March 14, 1900, was noticeable, as the amount of circulation outstanding rose to $236,200,000. On February 5, 1901, the issues reached $309,400,000; on February 25, 1902, $314,400,000; at the close of 1902, $336,500,000, and on September 9, 1903, $375,000,000.

During the panic year of 1873, 11 national banks with capital of $3,550,000 failed and were placed in charge of receivers; but, by reason of organizations, there was no material change in the paid-in capital stock, the effect of conditions being shown in the aggregate resources of the banks, which decreased $109,800,000 between February 28 and December 26 of that year.

In the financial crisis of 1884 there was a loss to the system by failures of 13 banks with aggregate capital of $1,535,000, and a shrinkage in assets of nearly $100,000,000.

Notwithstanding a loss of 10 banks with capital of $1,025,000 by failures during the year 1890, when the financial stringency prevailed, there were increases both in number and capital of active associations, and no striking change in the volume of bank assets until December 19, when the returns showed a decline to $3,046,900,000 from $3,141,400,000 on October 2, the date of the prior report. By February 26, 1891, the assets had risen to $3,065,000,000, and on December 2, 1891, to $3,227,800,000.

The financial crisis of 1893 resulted in the suspension of business of a large number of banks, but in the actual failure of only 58 national banking associations, with total capital of $9,820,000. During that year the banks' assets reached their maximum on March 6, namely, $3,459,700,000, and decreased on October 3 to $3,109,500,000, a shrinkage of $350,200,000. By December 19 the resources had increased from the low-water mark to $3,242,300,000, or an increase over the October returns of about $132,000,000.

Conditions existing in 1896 resulted in the failure of 33 national banks, with total capital of $5,285,000. The net reduction in number of banks and capital, as shown by the returns on February 28 and December 17, was 38 and $6,800,000, respectively. During this year the volume of resources fluctuated from a maximum of $3,377,600,000 on May 7 to a minimum of $3,263,600,000 on October 6.

The table in question will be found of interest also, as it relates to the percentage of national-bank circulation to bank capital and assets and to money in the United States.

On October 3, 1864, the note issues amounted to 52.1 per cent of the paid-in capital stock, increased to 60.8 on April 2, 1866, and rose to 70.4 on January 6, 1868. From that date to March, 1884, the rate did not fall below 58.3, but varied between that percentage and 70.8, an average of about 68 per cent. From the beginning of 1884, the rate steadily decreased from 57.9 to 18.4 on July 9, 1891. Thereafter there was a gradual increase to 33.4 on December 1, 1898, continuing without any material change until April, 1900, when the rate rose to 38.3. From that date to the close of 1903 (September 9), the rate varied from a minimum of 42.7 to a maximum of 49.8, the latter being the highest proportion of circulation to capital since the close of 1885.

The relation of circulation to aggregate assets of national banking associations varied from 20 per cent, approximately, during the first ten years of the existence of the national banking system to a minimum of 4 per cent in 1890. The highest rate since that time was 6.4 in October, 1896, and since that year has varied from a minimum of 4.2 to a maximum of 5.9.

The stock of specie and other currency of the country on June 30, 1863, was $674,800,000; in 1873, $774,400,000; in 1883, $1,472,400,000; in 1893, $1,738,800,000, and in 1903, $2,688,100,000. The percentage of national-bank circulation to money in the country ranged from 35.5 in 1866, when the outstanding circulation had nearly reached the legal limit, to a maximum of 43.7 in 1873; declined to 37.2 in 1876; rose to 38 in 1877, and thereafter steadily decreased to 7.3 in 1891. In 1892 the rate was 8.1; rose to 11 in 1896; declined to 9.1 in 1899; again increased to 12.8 in 1901; dropped to 12.1 in 1902, but rose to 12.9 at the close of June 1903, the highest rate since 1886, but less than at that date by 2.8 per cent.

MONEY IN THE BANKS OF THE COUNTRY.

Efforts to ascertain, in detail, information with respect to the amount and character of the money held by banks other than national have not been attended with entirely satisfactory results. In the report for 1902, in order to show as nearly as possible the amount of gold and silver in banks, the cash holdings of banks other than national, located in States not reporting the exact amount in detail, were estimated upon the basis of specie, etc., held by the national banks in such States. In the present compilation the cash holdings are classified exactly as reported to this office and necessarily show a reduction in the items gold and silver and a corresponding increase in unclassified cash. A summary of the returns is incorporated in the following table:

a $12,567,265, b $10,125,909, and c $9,240,801 in banks of island possessions not included in these returns.

Conditions existing in 1896, as will be seen by reference to the foregoing table, resulted in a loss of cash in banks of nearly $100,000,000 as compared with the holdings in 1895. In 1897, however, the amount held, $628,200,000, very nearly equaled the volume in banks in 1895. By 1902 there had been a gain over 1897 of nearly $210,000,000, and in 1903 a further gain of $10,000,000. The fluctuations in amount and per cent of money held by the banks, geographically considered, in the years 1896, 1897, 1902, and 1903 are interesting.

The following statement shows the amount and pro rata distribution of money in the banks of the country, by geographical divisions, for the years indicated:

STOCK OF MONEY OF THE WORLD.

The stock of money of the world, as shown by statistics compiled by the Mint Bureau, as of January 1, 1903, was $11,996,400,000, classified as follows: Gold, $5,382,600,000; silver, $3,680,300,000; uncovered paper currency, $2,933,500,000. The stock of the United States approximates one-fifth of the aggregate, amounting to $2,377,400,000, represented by $1,248,000,000 gold, $673,300,000 silver, and $456,100,000 uncovered paper currency. The per capita of gold in the world is $4.19, silver $2.86, and paper $2.28, and the aggregate per capita $9.33. The United States per capita of gold is $15.64, silver $8.44, paper $5.71, aggregate $29.79. With the exception of France, the Straits Settlements, and the South American States (excluding Bolivia and Colombia), the per capita of money in the United States exceeds all other countries, and its per capita of gold is the greatest with the following exceptions: France, $24.36; South African Republic, $24.33, and Australasia, $23.38. The Straits Settlements lead in the per capita of silver, namely, $47.45; France follows with $10.79, the Netherlands $10.68, Spain $9.34, and the United States with $8.44. The per capita of uncovered paper currency is the greatest, $27.90, in the South American States; second in order is Greece, $20.29, followed by Belgium, $16.16; Portugal, $11.67; Canada, $10.54, the per capita in the United States being $5.71.

In connection with the foregoing the appended table is of interest, relating to the growth by decades from 1800 to 1900 of population, money in the United States, the per capita in circulation, and the imports and exports, together with the wealth of the country from 1850 to 1900, and clearings for 1890, 1900, and 1903.

Through the aid of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor information has been obtained with respect to the number of depositors and total deposits in foreign savings banks, both trustee and postal. In the table following will be found statistics covering the number of depositors and deposits, together with the average deposit account, average deposit per inhabitant, and rates of interest allowed on savings accounts in countries relative to which returns of that character have been received.

To the statistics relating to foreign savings banks have been added the number of depositors and deposits in the savings banks of the United States, resulting in a total of savings depositors of 76,314,423 and in savings deposits of $9,900,749,029. The average per capita deposit in foreign savings banks is $100.54 and the deposit per inhabitant $10.43. The average account in the savings banks of the United States is $417.21 and the average per inhabitant $36.52.

^a Data relating to the "Caisse Nationale d'épargne."

THE BANKING POWER OF THE WORLD.

The capital, surplus profits, deposits, and circulation of banks of the United States, characterized as the "Banking power," aggregate $13,310,405,650, in which is included that of national banks amounting to $4,993,046,686; reporting State banks and bankers, $7,662,433,013, and nonreporting banks, estimated, $654,925,951.

The banking power of foreign countries, based upon the most reliable data, is stated to be $18,088,000,000 and the aggregate power of the world $31,398,000,000. Comparing this estimate with Mulhall's of 1890, it is shown that the banking power of the United States has increased since that date $8,160,000,000, or 158.4 per cent, the banking power of foreign countries $7,253,000,000, or 66.9 per cent, and the combined banking power of the world from $15,985,000,000 to $31,398,000,000, a total increase of $15,413,000,000, or 96.4 per cent. The subjoined tables give in detail the banking power of the United States, of foreign countries, and of the world, the latter being a comparative statement of conditions in 1890 and 1903:

STATE, SAVINGS, PRIVATE BANKS, LOAN AND TRUST COMPANIES.

As required by section 333 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the Comptroller presents herewith detailed information relative to the condition of the banking institutions of the country, other than national, so far as obtained for the year ended June 30, 1903.

Through the cooperation of State officials charged with the supervision of banks chartered and operated under State laws, and by the very general compliance with the request for reports made to individual banks and bankers, the Comptroller is enabled to present a more comprehensive statement of the condition of institutions of this character than has ever before been compiled by this Bureau.

Abstracts of official reports showing the resources and liabilities of commercial or State banks have been obtained from the banking departments of the States, Territories, and island possessions, except from South Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, Oregon, Alaska, and Hawaii, the data relating to banks located in the latter States having been compiled from reports furnished by the banks direct.

When the first attempt was made, in 1873, to comply with the provisions of the act of Congress relating to State-bank statistics, returns from only nine States could be obtained in response to the request of this office for information concerning this class of banks. At that period only a small number of the States had laws providing for the compilation and publication of data relating to banks incorporated under State laws. Now all of the States, with the exceptions noted, have banking departments or designated public officials charged with the duty of requiring reports from incorporated banks at stated periods. Abstracts of these reports made at close of business June 30, 1903, or for the nearest approximate date, upon compilation have been promptly furnished by such officials or facilities provided by them for the copying of the reports on file.

Circular letters from this Bureau requesting reports of condition as of June 30, 1903, were mailed early in June last to approximately 3,300 private banks and bankers in the various States and to 700 incorporated banks located in States where the laws do not require the submission or publication of reports. In response to these requests about 900 private banks and bankers sent reports of condition more or less complete, making, with the reports received from official sources, 33½ per cent of the private banks in existence, as shown by the most reliable data obtainable. Summarizing the returns, information has been obtained relative to the conditions of 8,745 incorporated and private banks and bankers, of which 5,962 are State banks, 531 loan and trust companies, 1,078 mutual and stock savings banks, and 1,174 private banks and bankers.

CONSOLIDATED RETURNS FROM STATE, SAVINGS, PRIVATE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES.

For purposes of comparison there is given herewith a table showing the principal items of resources and liabilities of banks other than national in the years 1898 to 1903, inclusive:

An analysis of the foregoing statement shows an increase in aggregate resources in 1903 over 1902 of about $661,000,000 and over 1898 of nearly $3,385,000,000. Loans and discounts amount to $4,296,675,586, a gain of more than $354,000,000 over the amount reported for 1902. A marked increase in the cash holdings during the past year is also exhibited in the statement, there being approximately $25,000,000 more money in the banks than was reported in 1902. Going back for a period of five years, it is of interest to note the gain in cash holdings over the prior year for each year since 1898. In approximate sums the increase in cash holdings of these banks was $15,970,000 in 1899 over 1898; $9,783,000, 1900 over 1899; $19,478,000, 1901 over 1900; $10,669,000, 1902 over 1901, and $24,997,000, 1903 over 1902. Capital stock increased from $499,621,208 in 1902 to $578,418,944 in 1903, a gain of $78,797,736 for the year and over $208,000,000 subsequent to 1898. Deposits increased during the year, approximately, $347,000,000 to $6,352,700,055, a sum greater by $611,000,000 than credited to deposits in all reporting banks—State and national—in 1898.

Capital stock of the 5,962 State banks is $302,264,497 and individual deposits $1,814,570,163. The number of banks of this character is 565 greater than reported in 1902. The cash holdings in this class of banks increased approximately during the year by $8,536,000 and aggregate assets by $182,000,000.

Reports of condition of 531 loan and trust companies were received for the current year, showing aggregate resources of $2,298,554,063, against 417 companies with aggregate resources of $1,983,214,707 reporting in 1902. Individual deposits in these institutions increased, approximately, $63,500,000 and cash holdings $17,000,000 over 1902.

Returns were obtained from 1,174 private banks and bankers with assets of $169,049,821. In 1902 reports were received from 1,039 banks of this character, whose assets were $169,364,435. While reports from a greater number of banks of this class were received than in 1902, meager returns from some States, notably New York, account for the decrease in the aggregate resources.

Savings-bank reports to the number of 1,078 have been received, of which 657 are from mutual institutions and 421 from stock savings banks, the latter being operated for the benefit of both shareholders and depositors. The aggregate resources of the latter class of banks are only about 11 per cent of the resources of all reporting institutions for savings. The mutual savings banks are all located in the New England and Eastern States, with the exception of 1 in West Virginia, 1 in Wisconsin, 4 in Ohio, 5 in Indiana, and 12 in Minnesota. The principal items of resources of savings banks, both mutual and stock, are as follows: Loans secured by real estate, $1,033,420,902; loans on other securities, $314,443,239; United States bonds, $13,206,494; State, county, and municipal bonds, $150,491,128; railroad bonds and stock, $279,685,569; bank stock, $31,995,519; other stock, bonds, etc., $976,164,734. Cash in bank is only $20,565 greater than the amount reported in 1902, being $30,897,903; but the cash to their credit with other banks is $123,704,192, being $2,307,221 more than shown by the reports of 1902.

The number of depositors in savings banks (exclusive of those in State banks of Illinois having savings departments) has increased since 1902 from 6,388,793 to 6,674,237 and the average deposit from $414.85 to $421.84. Including savings depositors in the Illinois State banks, the total number of depositors has increased from 6,666,672 in 1902 to 7,035,228 in 1903, and the average to each depositor, estimated to be $412.53 in 1902, to $417.21 this year. The aggregate deposits in savings institutions of the country in 1902 were $2,750,177,290, and for the current year $2,935,204,845, an increase of $185,027,555. The average sum, $380.74, to the credit of each depositor in the New England savings banks remains practically the same as in 1902, when it was $380.72. In the Eastern States the average deposit has increased to $437.99 from $428.46 in 1902. Pennsylvania and Maryland show the most marked increase, the average in the former State being estimated at $315.25, against $303.47 last year, and in the latter State $400.86 in 1903, against $345.52 in 1902.

In the following table is given a comparative statement of the number of depositors, amount of deposits, and average deposit account in the savings banks of the United States and geographical divisions for the years 1901-2 and 1902-3:

c Savings deposits in State institutions having savings departments; abstract of reports included with State banks.

From an examination of the returns submitted with respect to the rate of interest paid on savings accounts, it will be noted that the maximum rate of interest is 4 per cent and the minimum rate $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. The estimated average rate is $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, a slight decrease from the estimated average interest rate in 1902.

The following table shows the rate paid in each State by savings banks located therein:

The growth of savings banks by five-year periods from 1820 to 1845, and annually since that date, is shown in the accompanying table. In 1866 the number of depositors in institutions of this character reached 1,000,000 and the deposits $282,455,794, the average account being $264.70. In 1870 the number of depositors had increased to 1,630,846, the amount of deposits $549,874,358, and the average account $337.17. By 1880 the deposits reached $819,106,973 and the number of depositors 2,335,582, and average account $350.71. The amount to the credit of savings deposits in 1890 was $1,524,844,506, the number of depositors 4,258,893, and the average deposit account $358.03. The number of depositors in 1900 was 6,107,083, the average deposit $401.10, and the total amount to the credit of depositors $2,449,547,885. The amount to the credit of savings-bank depositors in 1903 was greater than the entire stock of money in the country, amounting to $2,935,204,845, to the credit of 7,035,228 depositors. The average account was $417.21, and the average per capita to population of the country $36.52.

From the most reliable records at command it appears that there are in existence in the country about 18,000 banks and banking institutions, including private bankers. In addition to returns from national banking associations reports have been received from 8,745 State and private banks, making the total number reporting 13,684. The aggregate capital of reporting banks is shown to be $1,321,924,992; deposits, $9,700,796,047, and aggregate resources, $14,303,116,954.

The principal items of resources and liabilities of national banks on June 9, and of all other banks and banking institutions on or about June 30, 1903, are incorporated in the following table:

Inquiries addressed to State officials requesting reports of resources and liabilities of the banks called also for information as to the number and capital of banks of various character organized in each State during the year ended June 30, 1903. While the returns do not cover the total number of organizations in every State, they are complete and official with respect to the States from which information was received. A summary of the returns is incorporated in the Appendix, and shows the organization of 754 banks, with capital stock of $35,073,517, of which 611, with capital of $19,844,898, were incorporated commercial banks; 110, with capital of $14,912,504, loan and trust companies; 7, with capital of $172,000, savings institutions, and 26 private banks, with capital of $144,115.

There will be found in Table XI, in the Appendix, the capital, the amount and average rate per cent of dividends paid by State and private banks and by loan and trust companies, submitting information of that character, for the year ended on or about June 30, 1903. Reports covering the subject were received from 2,894 State banks, with capital of $140,412,289, showing the payment of dividends to the amount of $12,526,819, or an average of 8.95 per cent; from 395 loan and trust companies, with capital of $174,240,937, which paid dividends to the amount of $17,045,214, or 9.78 per cent; and from 400 private banks and bankers, with capital of $8,620,494, reporting dividends paid to the amount of $1,084,274, an average rate of 12.57 per cent. The average dividend paid by State banks remains practically the same as reported in 1902, while that paid by loan and trust companies shows an increase of nearly 1 per cent. The statement in respect to dividends paid by private banks and bankers contains the first reliable data of the kind obtained by this bureau in regard to that class of banks.

GROWTH OF BANKING IN THE UNITED STATES.

In 1882 there were in operation 2,239 national banking associations, with capital of $477,200,000 and deposits of $1,131,700,000; and also, as shown by reports to this office, 5,063 incorporated State and private banks, with capital and deposits of $234,900,000 and $1,718,700,000, respectively, or an aggregate of 7,302 banks and banking institutions, with capital of $712,100,000 and deposits of $2,850,400,000.

From returns made to this office on or about June 30, 1903, it is shown that the number of national banks has increased since 1882 to 4,939, with capital of $743,506,048 and deposits of $3,348,095,992. The number of State and private banks in existence in 1903 was 13,291, with capital of $730,822,464 and deposits of $6,855,222,486. The total number of national, State, and private banks is shown to be 18,230, the capital $1,474,328,512, and the deposits $10,203,318,478.

As will be observed from the accompanying table, the increase in number of national banks from 1882 to 1903 was over 120 per cent, and that of banks other than national over 162 per cent. In 1882 national-bank capital represented 67.01 per cent and the deposits 39.7 per cent of the aggregate capital and deposits of all reporting banks and banking institutions. The percentage of both capital and deposits of national banks shows a gradual reduction from that date to 1903 to 50.43 per cent and 32.81 per cent, respectively. Within the period in question the capital of national, State, and private banks was practically doubled and the deposits nearly quadrupled.

Comparing the number of banks, capital, and deposits with the population of the United States, it appears that in 1882 there was one bank for every 7,190 inhabitants, the capital amounting to $13.60 per inhabitant and the deposits $54.30. In 1892 there was one bank for every 7,016 inhabitants, the per capita of capital and deposits being $16.40 and $71.40, respectively. The greater increase in number of banks as compared with population in 1902 resulted in one bank for every 4,897 of population, the per capita of capital and deposits having increased to $16.90 and $122.70, respectively. In 1903 there was in active operation, as shown by reports filed in this office, one bank for every 4,410 of population, the per capita of capital being $18.30 and of deposits $126.90.

In the following table is incorporated the number of reporting banks, together with capital, deposits, and percentage of capital and deposits for the years indicated:

FAILURES OF STATE BANKS.

The managing editor of Bradstreet's has courteously furnished information obtained by the Bradstreet Agency relating to incorporated and private banks which failed during the year 1903, accompanied by a statement of the total liabilities and assets. The number of failures was 26; the assets of the banks being $2,166,852, and the liabilities $4,005,643. Included in the number of failures were 6 State banks, 1 savings bank, 2 trust companies, and 17 private banks.

In 1896, through the instrumentality of the corps of national bank examiners and from receivers, assignees, and court officials, information was obtained with respect to the number of insolvent banks other than national, with their assets and liabilities at date of failure and also dividends paid on claims. The inquiry covered the period beginning with 1866 and terminating in 1896. A compilation of the returns appears in the following table, from which it will be observed that there were 1,234 failures of banks with aggregate capital of $53,632,259; nominal assets at date of failure, $214,312,190.58; and liabilities of $220,629,998.27, on which dividends were paid to the amount of $100,088,726.95, an average rate of about 45 per cent. To the statistics covering the period in question have been added data furnished to this Bureau by the Bradstreet agency annually from 1897 to 1903, inclusive. As will be observed the information covering this latter period relates exclusively to the number of failures, the nominal assets, and the liabilities. No information is at command with respect to the settlement of the affairs of State banks which failed since 1896.

BANKING IN THE ISLAND POSSESSIONS.

Through the courtesy of the treasurers of Porto Rico and the Philippine Archipelago, and from private sources in the Hawaiian Islands, sufficient data have been obtained to indicate in what proportion the island possessions have contributed to the figures representing the banking resources of the country.

A consolidation of the reports of colonial and national banks received shows the aggregate resources of banks in these possessions on or about June 30, 1903, to have been $43,912,373. The loans, including overdrafts, aggregate $22,569,615; bonds and other securities, $1,922,663; cash in bank, $9,240,801; capital stock, $5,138,770; surplus and undivided profits, $1,688,066; individual deposits, $23,264,315.

THE PHILIPPINES.

Summaries of the returns of the 10 banks in the Philippines as of dates March 31 and June 30, 1903, appear in the appendix, together with individual statements as made to the treasurer of the Philippine Archipelago on the latter date. The principal items of resources and liabilities of these banks on June 30, 1903, are loans, including overdrafts, $13,189,137; stocks, securities, etc., $312,316; cash in bank, including gold and silver bullion and foreign currency, $8,800,201; capital stock, $1,388,265; surplus and undivided profits, $1,525,919; notes in circulation, $1,176,396; individual deposits, $9,525,236; public deposits (insular), $5,180,117. Compared with the summary of reports for June 30, 1902, loans have increased in the sum of $1,442,046; stocks, etc., $9,680; cash in bank, $835,068; notes in circulation, $127,856. Individual deposits have increased $1,019,642, while public deposits, which include deposits of the Insular Treasury and of funds of disbursing officers, have decreased from $9,617,272 in 1902 to $5,180,117 for the present year, a decrease of $4,437,155 in this class of deposits. The aggregate resources show a net loss of about $2,000,000. The banks from which reports were received are the Manila agency and the Iloilo subagency of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Manila agency and Cebu subagency of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, the Banco Español-Filipino at Manila and its Iloilo subagency, the Monte de Piedad y Caja de Ahorros of Manila, the American Bank at Manila, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, and the International Banking Corporation of New York, making in all 10 institutions against 11 which reported last year, one bank, the North American and Philippine Loan and Trust Company, having discontinued business in the islands.

While the net reduction in the aggregate resources of these institutions since June 30, 1902, amounts, as stated, to approximately $2,000,000, all the banks named, with the exception of the two English banks and branches and one American bank, appear to have gained in their volume of assets. The withdrawal of a large portion of the insular treasury and disbursing officers' deposits from the English banks, and the transfer of a large part of such deposits to the American institutions, account for the shrinkage in the aggregate resources of the former banks and increased assets of the latter. Reports of June 30, 1903, indicate that the two principal American banks at Manila have increased their assets during the year by a sum approximating $5,500,000.

In the summary of the Philippine bank reports it will be noted that overdrafts materially exceed the loans and discounts. This item represents, in fact, mortgage loans, as it is the custom to grant the privilege of an overdraft up to a certain amount to a customer who has previously executed a mortgage on either real estate or chattels.

HAWAII.

Consolidating the returns received from the banking institutions of the Territory of Hawaii, namely, two national and four territorial and private banks, the aggregate resources amount to $7,400,954, against $8,755,641 as reported for 1902. The apparent decrease, as shown by these figures, is owing to the fact that only four of the banks responded to the Comptroller's request for a statement of condition as of June 30, 1903, one of the nonreporting banks being a large incorporated institution. The principal items of resources and liabilities of all reporting banks of the Territory are: Loans, etc., $4,957,730; bonds and stocks, $606,197; cash in bank, $1,147,203; capital, $2,213,500; surplus, etc., $127,421; deposits, $4,743,838.

PORTO RICO.

Reports have been received from 8 banks in Porto Rico, operating under Territorial laws, and one national banking institution. The consolidation of these returns show loans aggregating $2,783,184; bonds, securities, etc., $1,003,057; cash in bank, $855,400; capital stock, $1,537,004; surplus, $273,207; deposits, $2,763,210, and aggregate resources, $6,199,902. Compared with returns for 1902, these figures indicate gains, except in respect to loans and cash in bank. The loans appear to have decreased in the sum of $186,641, and cash, $46,042. The aggregate resources have increased in the sum of $840,813 over the previous year. A recent statement furnished by the acting treasurer of the Territory relating to cash holdings of, and dividends paid by, banks of the island shows the following classification of money in bank: Fractional silver, $5,491; silver dollars, $149,721; gold coin, $215,927, and legal tender notes, $451,491. From the amount of dividends reported paid during the year by the various banks, it appears that two banks, namely, The Banco Espanol de Porto Rico and The American Colonial Bank, paid 5 per cent; the Credito y Ahorro Ponceno 8½ per cent, and the Banco Popular 4 per cent.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Comptroller again renews the recommendations contained in his report for 1902 for legislation in regard to liquidation and consolidation of national banks and extension of corporate existence. The matter of consolidation of banks was apparently very little considered at the time of the passage of the national-bank act. The necessary method of effecting a consolidation under the law as it now exists is inconvenient and cumbersome both to the banks and to the Comptroller's office, and in the interest of better and more efficient administration the Comptroller recommends such an amendment of the law as was advised in his last report.

The national-bank act does not sufficiently protect the rights of minority stockholders on the question of extension of expiring charters, as explained in detail in the report for 1902, and the Comptroller wishes to again call attention of the Congress to this, and respectfully urge that action be taken on this important matter for the better protection of minority or dissenting shareholders.

In the preparation of this report more than usual attention has been given to gathering information in regard to bank-note circulation, the classification of banks by geographical divisions, and also by the proportions of maximum circulation they have issued. Some useful and interesting figures and statistics in regard to the presentation of bank notes for redemption are also given.

The most notable fact in regard to the national-bank circulation is the great increase in its volume, which reached $421,222,489 on September 5, 1903, the largest amount which has ever been in circulation. It is 55.43 per cent of the maximum possible circulation, which is higher than this percentage has been since 1886. This increase in the volume of circulation has been largely due to special efforts on the part of the Treasury Department. It has been feared during the past few months that when the demand came for currency to move the crops this year it might produce more than the usual disturbance in the money market. That this demand has been met with less disturbance and less advance in rates of interest than for several years past is doubtless due largely, among other causes, to this increase in bank-note circulation. It is further of interest to note that just as the circulation was reaching its maximum and the demand for bonds had advanced their price, the deposit of lawful money to retire circulation, which for some months had been light, suddenly increased, and during the latter half of September applications were received taking up the maximum of $3,000,000 per month for the months of September, October, November, and December.

This still further emphasizes the most serious defect in our system that the variation in the volume of our currency, instead of responding to the demand for currency, depends on the market price of bonds. Until our bank-note circulation is made automatically to respond to demand for currency for daily cash transactions without reference to the price of bonds it will never be entirely satisfactory or efficient.

In the Comptroller's report for 1902 a recommendation was made that the national banks be allowed to issue a portion of their notes uncovered by the deposit of bonds. This seems the most simple and practical, as well as the safest way, to introduce some elasticity into our bank-note circulation and the same recommendation is renewed.

During the past year or more our banks have successfully stood the very severe strain due to a great decline in the market prices of all classes of securities and the natural reaction following a period of great business activity and very general speculation, not only in stocks and securities but in many commodities and products. There have been, considering all the circumstances, fewer bank failures than might have been expected. Those which have occurred have been due to special or local causes or gross mismanagement, and, in some cases, most flagrant dishonesty on the part of the bank officials.

As a rule the reports of the bank examiners show the national banks to own very few stocks, and almost none of a very speculative character. The bank reports show total loans by all the banks of $1,372,697,751 on collateral security. These loans are mostly on good classes of stocks and bonds well margined, and as far as they are concerned, there is less cause for concern than there has been at any time for several years. The loans are readjusted on a lower basis of prices than before, and are, as a whole, as amply or more amply margined than they were on the higher prices. It is due to the banks to say that the way they have handled their business and met this decline is an evidence of strength and careful management.

That there has not been more trouble with the banks and disturbance of business generally during this period of declining prices is also a great evidence of the confidence of our people in all our money and currency. If there had been the slightest doubt as to our monetary standard or as to any of our currency in circulation we might have had a most severe and far-reaching crisis. That we have not only escaped this, but that there has not been greater disturbance of general business shows what progress and improvement there has been in all our banking, financial, and monetary affairs since they were last subjected to serious strain of this kind.

In concluding this report the Comptroller desires to testify to the efficiency and zeal of the Deputy Comptroller, the chiefs of division, and the employees of this office. The work of the office has rapidly and greatly increased in the last year, and that it has been handled even more promptly than before is due to the hearty cooperation of all connected with the work, and especially to the capacity for organization and executive ability of the Deputy Comptroller, Mr. T. P. Kane. Special credit is also due to Mr. W. J. Fowler, chief of the organization division, for his work in gathering and arranging figures and statistics and their analysis for this report.

WM. B. RIDGELY,
Comptroller of the Currency.

NOTE 1.—Specie payments were suspended from Jan. 1, 1862, to Jan. 1, 1879. During the greater part of that period gold and silver coins were not in circulation except on the Pacific coast, where, it is estimated, the specie circulation was generally about $25,000,000. This estimated amount is the only coin included in the above statement from 1862 to 1875, inclusive.

NOTE 2.—In 1876 subsidiary silver again came into use, and is included in this statement, beginning with that year.

NOTE 3.—The coinage of standard silver dollars began in 1878 under the act of Feb. 28, 1878.

NOTE 4.—Specie payments were resumed Jan. 1, 1879, and all gold and silver coins, as well as gold and silver bullion in the Treasury, are included in this statement from and after that date.

NOTE 5.—This table represents the circulation of the United States as shown by the revised statements of the Treasury Department for June 30 of each of the years specified.

RESOURCES AND LIABILITIES OF THE SECOND BANK OF THE UNITED STATES.

[Chartered by Congress in 1816, for twenty years; renewal of charter denied; in consequence, reorganization was effected by means of authority of the legislature of the State of Pennsylvania. The bank assigned in 1841, the affairs being finally liquidated in 1856, and resulted in the payment in full, interest and principal, of liabilities to depositors and note holders; the shareholders, however, received nothing on their investment in stock of the bank.]
